Dr. Alison Blay-Palmer is an Associate Professor in Geography and Environmental Studies at Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, Ontario. Alison is the Founding Director of the newly launched Centre for Sustainable Food Systems at Wilfrid Laurier University. Her research and teaching combine her passions for community viability, food systems, green economic development, and citizen engagement. She is the author of ‘Food Fears: From industrial to sustainable food systems’ (2008) and the editor of ‘Imagining sustainable food systems: Theory and Practice’ (2010). She is also the guest editor for two themed issues in Local Environment: The International Journal of Justice and Sustainability, the first on ‘Sustainable Communities’ 16(8) and the most recent one titled ‘Sustainable local food spaces: Constructing communities of food’. The latter builds on her work with Karen Landman and other colleagues in Canada and the EU through the Nourishing Communities research project (nourishingontario.ca).
